Experience Can something be in your car? (self.Paranormal)

submitted 2 months ago by Owlcity1997

Something weird happened to me yesterday that shook me up enough to make a Reddit and ask for advice. Or at least talk about it. Yesterday I got in my car at night, I sat in the dark for a bit while I replied to a text. Suddenly I heard very heavy breathing behind me. I knew nobody was in the car with me because I had just put my backpack in the back seat. For a sec I thought maybe my Pandora started playing a live concert version of a song, but I checked and no music was playing. Suddenly I heard an extremely faint laugh, almost like it was really far away but I know it was in my car (if that makes sense) I got really scared and for some reason my instinctual reaction was to turn my car on and drive into the well lit street. I haven't told anyone because I almost don't believe it happened. Anyone have any advice/input?

Worth going to the doctor and getting checked out.
Could be nothing. Could be a symptom.

It could have been auditory hallucinations. It could have been a person or an animal outside somewhere (sometimes it's really hard to tell where a sound actually came from).

Yeah I feel like if it happens again I might go get checked out just to cross that off the list of possibilities. Ive never experienced any form of hallucinations, never used any form of recreational drug, and nobody in my family has any history of mental illness. But the possibility is always there! Also sound does travel in strange ways, so even thought my doors were shut and there was nobody around that late I'm sure it's possible it could have come from outside. Thanks for the tip!

How long have you had your car? Is it used?

I've had this car for 4 months and yes it is used!

I would suggest looking into its history to see if anything like a death occurred in it. Also, out of curiosity, what kind of car is it?

How would someone go about finding out this info?

Services like car fax or Vinwiki would be a good start

I need to look into that myself actually. That seems like something that may be mentioned under certain circumstances

Edit: it appears that a death occurring in a vehicle is not something that is usually listed in a history report. The closest you could get would be to serve the previous owners names (if available) or look for signs of interior components having been replaced

It's a 2018 Honda Civic, I'll definitely look into the history of it. I bought it from a dealership so I just assumed it was a trade in or a repo but I guess there is the possibility that the previous owner could have passed away in it. Thanks for the tip!

Do you have the title? Sometimes it mentions past owners. If yes then check yours; if there are names listed then google them.

Where was the car parked at the time you heard these things? It's also possible that you heard an entity associated with the area you were parked in.

I checked the title and unfortunately it doesn't list the previous owner, only the dealership. At the time I was parked in an alley behind my mom's apartment complex, it was like midnight and there were no cars or people around that I could see. Not gonna lie it's a very dark creepy alley and not in the best parts of the neighborhood.
