Question

Can friendly ghosts turn harmful?

(self.Paranormal)

submitted 2 months ago by clarymundanebitch

Ever since I was a child, our house was haunted. Me and my family are accustomed to the random knocks, footsteps, opening and closing of doors etc. Then when I got older there are times that they would mimic our voices. One time me and my sister are talking to each other in our living room and we both suddenly hear MY OWN VOICE call out for her while I was still there in the same room. I was pretty freaked out. But they were friendly ghosts, they never tried to harm us or anything, just a little scare. I believed that these are the spirits of my mom, grandma and granpa whom all died in our property.

But something happened these past few weeks that really weirded us all. We were used to the occasional paranormal encounters but they are usually spread out in a year. They were never this active. These past few weeks we have been touched, me and my cousin both saw the same apparition. The opening and closing of doors became aggressive. And we've been seeing apparitions more now than before, and we believe that it's a different ghost than who were with us before and a poltergeist activity happened right before our eyes, a cooler was hauled across the room, that has never happened before. I've also heard a little boy's voice joining us in praying the holy rosary.

So far it hasn't turn harmful, I believe it's still friendly in a way. But is there a reason why they would suddenly become more active?

You should make sure that no one unbeknownst to you has tried to contact someone via spirit Box Ouija board, maybe a friend of a family member or something. I agree with the earlier response that it sounds like an entity. Extremely good chance someone was calling them in if they weren't like this before.

I come from a family of healers and sensitives so I've had paranormal and supernatural experiences all my life as has the rest of my family.

Gran used to tell us, kids, that the spirit world is all around us constantly and there is just a paper-thin veil dividing their world from ours, she also said they were just going about doing their own thing and as long as you are respectful and treat them with dignity they won't bother or harass you.

I have encountered both positive and negative spirits throughout my life (mostly positive) and although I can only speak from my own personal experience and my families, I have never known positive spirits to turn negative.

My family and I also practice Earth and Candle magic like Gran and generations of her people did back in the Motherland; so I'm including all of our belief systems, rituals and blessings in this answer;

I'm aware that there are thousands of other faiths belief systems and religions (or none at all) out there who have different views and beliefs than mine.

I agree with a couple things. Someone mentioned poltergeist and that could be possible. That's actually activity that comes from someone though. Is it possible you or someone in the house could be a medium of sorts and undergoing major stress?

Also though I'd like to point out (AND NOT SAYING THIS TO SCARE YOU) demons do not present themselves as harmful spirits at first because they want to form attachment. So yes, "good" ghosts can "turn" bad. Demons often come forward as innocent or familiar beings like children or family or friends. I would contact a medium or a priest or both and get everything worked out.

Demons can also dominate good spirits and command them to do bad things, just like they can with humans

Human ghosts need prayers for their soul. Let them join the rosary.

It really depends on the faith of the person before passing

A non-Catholic/Christian spirit isn't likely to respond to the rosary or prayers to save their souls!

They are. Objective reality exists (even if none of us have a complete understanding of it). And a spirit in this case prayed the rosary.

Indeed I don't pretend to understand anything completely, I was merely giving my perspective of the Spirit World. I respect your opinion!

I've never heard of ghosts of people mimicking voices. Those tend to be other entities. Spikes in activity can come from entities not liking a change in your house or a choice someone has made, or if someone has been trying to speak to it/them. If it's a poltergeist (comes from someone) then its directly tied to their state of Maybe really sad?

My sister and I have been diagnosed with depression last year. Could that have been the trigger? I don't understand why they would become more active now.

The best you can do is keep a level head and dont let these events scare you or make you stressed, that just adds fuel for the entity to work with. If you ask them to stop and they become aggressive, I'd smudge the house. I dont know why or if a new entity would just suddenly join your house. Perhaps it could have followed someone home from somewhere?
