Debunk This Strange Radio Voice From

Laptop (self.Paranormal)

submitted 2 months ago by cryptidman13

Okay - so, I've never posted here before, and haven't really had a "paranormal" experience before, but this was just too weird to NOT ask about.

Yesterday (12/1) I was working in my room on some assignments for university. I had originally been listening to some music on my laptop, but had paused it to take a break and scroll on my phone for a little bit. While I was on my phone, I started hearing some static come through my headphones - I ignored it at first, thinking it was just a faulty connection or something. However, it started to get louder and I began hearing a woman's voice among the static. At this point I put down my phone and began combing through my tabs, seeing if something started playing automatically, but none of them were playing anything. I checked my phone, too, and nothing was coming from it. It got louder until I could hear what sounded like a woman's voice over a radio (like a police radio), clear as day - I don't remember what she said because at this point I was too confused and freaked out to pay attention to that. The voice lasted for about 15-30 seconds before it faded out again.

I thought it might've been Bluetooth interference or something, but it's my laptop and my Bluetooth was off. I'm not connected to any radio stations or anything on my laptop, either. At this point, I'm just curious as to what it could be and wanted to see if any of you guys could come up with a plausible explanation for this.

You don't remember anything that was said at all? Not even one of the numbered codes that the police would usually say over the radio?

Honestly, nope - I think that it was so weird that my brain just shorted out. I know it sounded like the woman was talking to someone, but other than that, I can't remember anything that she was saying.

No I get it. I've had that happen to me before. You're in so much shock that you just can't process what's happening or being said

I had something similar happen often on my computer years back. It would always happen when a plane was flying over our house. I would just be online, and suddenly a weird Mexican gameshow or something would come over the speakers. It would be full of static and go in and out. I was never on Bluetooth or anything, just on a home computer. I think it has something to do with crossed radio signals or something.

Really? That's crazy! Thanks so much for letting me know - I guess something like that must've happened.
