Unexplained Weird Noises in my apartment complex (self.Paranormal)
submitted 2 months ago by Knight72X

When I was in college I lived in a decently safe apartment complex. You needed a gate clicker for your car, and the foot entrance required a code. All doors had a deadbolt and extensive locks for the sliding patio door. Well when the complex went under new management, the footpath gate code stopped working so anyone could push it open.

In mid-October, a note was sent out to all residents stating that a new gate code would be issued in the following days and for everyone to keep their doors locked due to suspicious behavior. The following week another note was sent out describing a man that had been seen peering over balconies and through windows, but the gate code still hadn't been fixed. On Halloween, I distinctly remember locking my deadbolt after a night out because my friends staying over, and I usually locked my door anyway since I lived alone.

I woke up the next morning and my door was unlocked, I asked if anyone had gone outside and they all said no. The following night I was by myself, and a little skeptical of my door so I made it a point to check my door before I went to sleep. Wake up the next morning and the door is unlocked. I was a little freaked out so I scanned my apartment for anything missing or a sign that someone had been in there. Nothing.

So by the third night, I was damn sure I locked my door and checked my sliding door locks as well. Around 5:30/6 am my cat started to get restless so I threw her in the living room until I was ready to wake up.

She starts making some weird noises a few minutes later, so I go into the living room and hear a weird noise, like a thud or something, I look at my door and it's fucking unlocked.

By this time I'm freaking out, called my apartment manager, and got them to inspect my apartment to make sure there was no way for anyone to get in and had my locks changed. Never happened again but I'm about 99% sure someone had been sneaking into my apartment when I wasn't home and watching me sleep. Maybe I was just being paranoid, but I know for a fact I had locked my door all three nights.

Probably an 'employee' of the cheap-assed new company that had taken over. Since you gave them an exact time they could check who was on duty and fire them.

This is quite scary. Glad you are safe.

Perhaps consider installing security cameras, yk, just in case?

You can even get an app to turn your laptop camera into a security camera.
