Discussion Bad Luck with Devices... with a twist.

(self.Paranormal)

submitted 2 months ago by _mini-jin

I've read a few stories of people who have bad luck with devices, and I've met a few people who have bad device luck as well... but not the way I have it. Let me explain.

Everything I touch breaks. Sooner or later, it breaks. Whether I drop it, it gets knocked out of my hands, or something else, it breaks. That sounds like just clumsiness at first, right? Well I'd attribute it to that too, except for devices.

I'm an electronics fiend. I love computers, laptops, gaming consoles, you name it. I take exceptional care of them. Only browsing sites I know are safe, only playing games from companies I trust, making sure that there are no hard objects in their bags to break them... I have a strong care record. But when it comes to their lasting record, well... they don't last long. I have this strange power to make devices stop working. And not their internals. Their outsides break. Something becomes physically wrong with them, which is something that other "I have bad device luck" people don't seem to have happen to them.

First three computers? All mysteriously stopped working one day. First laptop? Somehow got its screen cracked. Second laptop? Was put on a shelf and a nearby chair decided to fall off a table and take my laptop with it, ending the laptop then and there. First 2DS? Lower touchscreen malfunctioned and only 3/4 of the screen could be touched. Third laptop? The one that I am using? Got dropped from a chair by my dad and now it's broken in two places.

I don't know why it's electronic devices and physical objects specifically that break at my touch. It's horrendous. Especially considering that all of the people who know me do the reverse. Even when they're caught dead in the middle of a natural disaster like a hurricane or a fire, they're fine. If they have a habit of suffering injuries from physical activity or accidents, once they meet me, their injuries cease.

I don't know why I have good luck with people but terrible luck with objects. Were inanimate objects cruel to me in my past life and now I've been given the power to destroy them? Am I just incredibly unlucky? Is my luck riddled with duality?

~~I also have to eventually tell my dad that this laptop is broken, but that's an off topic issue for another subreddit.~~

Sidenote: My wife jokes about being one of those SLiders. She's walked past lights at work and they start glitching.

Same any electronic item that I'm in daily contact with develops glitches, countless work handhelds have developed so many software glitches that they have to be factory restored and rebuilt or retired, current one I've had 2 months and it's had 2 factory restores and rebuilds, watches, mobiles, car key, fobs, TV remotes, I think it's my personal aura

I had an icemaker at one of my old jobs give me shocks all the time. Nobody experienced it until about a month after I mentioned it happening, then they all got it.

Happens to me too.

Dell laptop, had issues. HP laptop was constantly plagued by malfunctions, wont update, is too slow. Macbook pro just glitched and stopped working one day, never came back on.

My desktop has issues from time to time.

First iPod I dropped, and a small dent on the back (tiny as could be) made it stop working. Other kids had even more damaged iPods, but they kept working.

My Toshiba gigabeat which I thought was great, broke on an airplane flight. Just stopped working.

Car electrical problems like you wouldn't believe. Yeah, my electrical items break more often than others.

My house never had problems with too many items being on. We moved in, it's a big issue. The people before us had so many things.

The bathroom light stopped working, even though the handyman was at a loss to figure out what it was (he's certified in electricity, gas and plumbing). The front light never worked after I changed the bulb.

What is this some kind of specialized demon or something that makes you damaging to electronics?

I had my 3ds have electricity arch from it into my draws (aluminium handle, made of wood) on one occasion, but the ds, draws and charger are all fine, there was no burning, scorching or even any oxidation on the handles. I have no idea why this happened, the only thing wrong with the DS is a cracked screen.
