Unexplained Strange shared time-warp/flashback in Portland, Oregon - any ideas on this? (self.Paranormal)

submitted 2 months ago by Anemoia793

This is a shared experience between my husband and I while driving one night a few years ago. It wasn't really a glitch in the matrix, or a time-warp, or a flashback, but almost a combination of all three. We both wonder if we stumbled upon a decades old crime scene. Please read on and tell me what you think or if you've ever experienced something similar.

My husband was driving, and I was in the passenger seat. We were chilling out with some music and quiet time just rolling along. We were on Sandy Blvd and turned right onto NE 148th Ave. Not far after the turn, there is a railroad crossing. Right passed the railroad crossing is when we experienced what we experienced.

Suddenly a strange moment came over both of us. The frame was only a second or two, but in both of our minds we were transported back in time. We believe this because of the look of the area. Where there is currently industrial buildings and a paved road, suddenly there was all farmland with tall amber colored grass and a narrow gravel road. Along the left side of the road by the ditch, there was an old sedan - possibly early 1950's, rounded edges, with the trunk open (possibly maroon). As we looked at the vehicle, a man who was crouched behind it stood up. He was stocky, probably in his 40's-50's, but his face is too obscure to recall. He seemed very ordinary and non-descript but dangerous. There was an extreme tension to the moment. The man was glaring and very clearly telling us with his expression to turn the other way. There was a feeling that we'd just stumbled upon something very bad and that we would be next if we didn't turn back. Predator looking at prey. Almost like he had just pulled a body out of the other side and didn't want to be caught. And then it was over.

Like a snap of a finger, everything went back to normal. We were back on that same modern paved road driving along. We both turned to each other and said, "did you feel that?" We compared stories, and both my husband and I had witnessed the exact same thing. So eerie and inexplicable.

The thing is, it was too short of an experience to really gather all the information. It was almost like an imprint on our consciousness rather than the world physically changing around us. It was similar to watching a movie, but someone spliced in a few frames from decades back of the same location.

I have tried to mention the experience to a few trusted people, but the whole thing isn't as sexy as a horror film ghost story, and I don't have enough information to make it that interesting. However I have wracked my brain ever since for what this could be.

I have searched historical records in Portland looking for unsolved murders, disappearances, etc. But I haven't been able to find anything concrete. So I decided to make this reddit account to share this story and some other bizarre ones in hopes that someone will be able to relate or find some archives that make me feel less alone in this experience. Please be kind since I am new to this platform. I hope this is posted in the right place. Thanks!

I hadn't even thought of the mob, but this dude in retrospect definitely looked like the type. If it was a mobster, that adds an even cooler layer to it!

I instantly wondered if you could have been near an electric line train track. And then I read that you were near a rail road crossing. The reason being, their is a Street in the UK that is famous for phenomena that is similar to time warp, time travel, glitch in time experiences. Experts and Scientists are now of the belief that it is all somehow connected to the underground railway system. A network of tunnels with a train station lies directly beneath the street. The electricity is the source that supposedly causes this phenomena. The street is Bold Street, Liverpool, well documented. All very strange goings on. X

Woah I had never even thought about that! Now I want to research Bold Street since I've never heard of it. It sounds like a fun new rabbit hole to go down. Thanks so much! XX
