Experience I think my brother brought home a ghost. (self.Paranormal)

submitted 2 months ago by OfficialMIKEMZ

Background-My brother doesn't do anything really that involves ghosts, he works at my local IHOP, but he used to always tell me each day he got home about how he and his coworkers were dealing with some strange experiences, random tugs on clothing, doors opening when they're closed, things falling randomly even if they're not wobbly enough to fall.

Present-My brother came home one day and then things started happening over the course of the next few weeks, even still occurring at the present time of me writing this. He and I keep seeing dark figure peeking around corners, things running behind a wall, things randomly falling and making loud sounds throughout our house, and we sometimes spot things in the darkness, either at night or in unlit rooms. I jokingly said to him "I think you brought home that ghost you always talk about" and he said that he probably did from working there so much and complaining about it. I've been trying to catch the ghost lacking with a picture or video, but I think it's too smart to get caught by real evidence. My dad hasn't seen anything, or at least he hasn't told us that he's seen anything, but we haven't asked him because he's working most days, and sleeping when he's not working. I'm not sure what to do about this. Nothing really bad has happened yet, so should I just let the ghost be, or continue trying to capture it?

We have something similar at where I work, a local papa John's. Random stuff falling over, getting tossed across the room, doors opening blah blah. I've always wondered why tho? Like why a pizza joint would be haunted at all? I'm sure he wonders the same of the ihop

Put out a motion sensor and a voice recorder for starters. Then go with an IR camera. Or maybe a trail-cam in the house and only turn it on at night. You're bound to detect something. I suppose it is possible something came home with your brother, but where was he that something would attach to him? Is the IHOP? It's actually the International House of Paranormal. Just some thoughts.

On camera, like how most ghost investigators say they're trying to capture paranormal activity

It hasn't done much to disturb me, it's just a bit creepy when I'm not expecting it

I brought something home on accident once. I just told it firmly to leave. This is my house, you cannot stay here, you must go back to where you came from. Never had an issue since.

Agreed. Being assertive over yourself and your space will make the difference.
